

Screen, triage and treat – a digital paradigm for risk stratification in chronic kidney disease (CKD)

Navdeep Tangri

University of Manitoba

Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada

Machine learning models are used in our everyday life to help improve decision-making. For patients with diabetes who are at risk for kidney disease, machine learning models can help identify 1)- who should be screened for CKD and 2)- who is going to progress. Identification of these high-risk individuals should then be followed by an integrated treatment approach that aligns intensity of care with risk of disease progression and enables personalized therapy for CKD.